

MICHAEL SCHELPEVS VS. NICOLE SCHELPEVS
GENERAL FACTS

Michael and Nicole Schelpes have been married for fourteen years. During much of their marriage, Nicole played a substantial role in managing the family's personal affairs and supporting Michael's career, particularly during Olympic training cycles and periods of frequent travel. More recently, Nicole has become increasingly involved in philanthropy and wellness-related ventures.

Over the last several years, tensions have developed between the parties regarding lifestyle preferences, work obligations, and long-term priorities. Michael has continued to maintain a demanding travel schedule and remains focused on expanding his post-retirement business opportunities. At the same time, Nicole has increasingly desired stability and a more private lifestyle centered around family and her personal projects. Although the parties initially attempted counseling, they mutually concluded that reconciliation was unlikely.

Approximately six months ago, Michael and Nicole separated. Both parties are committed to resolving their divorce privately and efficiently. Neither wants a prolonged public dispute that could attract media attention or negatively affect future professional opportunities. Through counsel, the parties have already resolved custody matters involving their two teenage children, and they reached a broad agreement on monthly financial support. However, significant disagreements remain concerning the division of several major marital assets and certain ongoing financial arrangements.

The parties have agreed to participate in a private negotiation session to resolve the remaining disputed issues without litigation.
